

MyPrint Corporation and Agility Agree to Long Term, Multi-Million Dollar Contract

(IRVINE, Calif., January 31, 2007) – MyPrint Corporation, a leader in providing business services software applications, announced today that it has signed a multi-year, multi-million dollar agreement with Agility, a global integrated supply chain solutions provider with more than 450 offices worldwide. The Americas region of Agility, headquartered in Santa Ana, Calif., will be taking advantage of MyPrint's award-winning, on-demand software application eTools by creating and maintaining a comprehensive and effective marketing portal.

MyPrint's eTools will provide users in Agility's offices located in North and South America the ability to customize and order their branded materials quickly and easily online.

"eTools will be a great asset to Agility as we unite our portfolio of logistics services under one new brand," said Jerry Levy, VP marketing of Agility. "This site will bring together many offices and simplify the ordering process." eTools will offer a full-range of marketing materials and services, including print-on-demand, print, direct mail, stationery, consulting and promotional items.

"Agility's utilization of MyPrint's eTools demonstrates the breadth and success of our product and software offering," said Kent Barkouras, president and CEO of MyPrint. "We are thrilled to have this internationally respected company as one of our new customers, and I am confident that a strong demand for our software applications will continue to grow as a result of this contract."

With the finalization of the Agility contract, MyPrint currently serves industry leaders in eight vertical markets from all over the world, including industries in distribution, education, financial services, healthcare, hospitality, retail, travel and manufacturing.

"We are now reaping the benefits of last summer's implementation of our national sales force and we expect to announce continued success across all vertical markets in the near future," Barkouras added.
