

'Working Wardrobes' Raises More than $100,000

by Alexa DuMity

2 days 22 hrs ago | 291 views | 0 | 3 | | |

From L to R: Front – Kassidi Tillich. Back – Working Wardrobes Founder and CEO Jerri Rosen, Richard Shugg, LynnMarie Cooper, Patrick Tillich.

Denim brings to mind jeans, work clothes, so it was only appropriate the non-profit organization Working Wardrobes raised over $100,000 with their third fundraiser titled Blue Jeans, Boots, and Swing.

The fundraiser was held June 5 at the Shea Center and attended by 300. Fundraising was set-up through table sponsorships, ticket sales and auction opportunities. Some of the auctions included a chance for a walk-on role in the TV Show

Mad Men, signed scripts from other shows and vacation packages. Sponsors of the event included U.S. Bank and Autobytel as well as many others.

A barbeque dinner was served, and swing dancing was accompanied by live music. After dinner, guests were able to hear about Working Wardrobe's client success stories. Patrick Tillich, Rowena, Regina and Whanja spoke about how the organization helped the with their career development, interview skills, financial literacy and dressing professionally.

Offering a variety of programs, Working Wardrobes caters to people from backgrounds of alcohol and substance abuse, domestic violence, homelessness and other life crisis. They strive for their programs to help them confidently enter the workforce.

For more information visit www.workingwardrobes.org.